A GREEN FORGER.

How Harry Williams, of Woodland,
Tried to Raise Money With Which to Celebrate.

On the morning of July 4th a sandy-haired and complexioned young man, about 26 years of age, presented for payment to cashier Talmage, of the Bank of Richwood, a check calling for $68, made payable to "Jimmy Brown," or bearer, and signed "Lenox & Brothers." Mr. Talmage at once recognized it as a forgery and refused payment until the young man, who gave his name as Henry Johnson, should bring in one of the Lenox brothers to say the check was all right. The young man left the check and went out, and steps were immediately taken to see that he did not get away. When shown the check, Mr. O. P. Lenox pronounced it a clear forgery and the next step was to fasten it on and secure a warrant to arrest the young man.

The case was given to Capt. John Cunningham, who was not long in sifting the thing to the bottom. It developed that the young man's name was Henry Williams, son of Wm. Williams, of Woodland, and he at first claimed that "Jimmy Brown" owed him and had given him the check to have cashed so he could take out his money and turn the balance over to "Jimmy," and that was all he knew about it.

But he soon weakened on that and in a very few minutes Capt. Cunningham, by methods he can so adroitly employ, had a full confession out of him. "Jimmy Brown" was a myth and Williams confessed that the check was a forgery of his own from beginning to end.

This circumstance led to the location of a forgery of the same kind committed Feb. 13, 1893. On that day a check made payable to "Fred White" and signed Lenox Brothers, calling for $73.15, was paid, and the fact that it was bogus was not discovered until the check came into the possession of Lenox Bros. This was some time after the check had been paid and no one in the bank could remember who had presented it, so the matter was kept still in the hope that the guilty party would do just what he finally did, and the trap worked beautifully. Any one looking at the two checks will not hesitate to say they were both written by the same hand.

Williams, however, protests that he knows nothing about the first check, but Capt. Cunningham trapped him again by getting him to write "Fred White" and it was an exact fac simile of the name on the former check.

Williams was locked up and after a hearing before Esq. Hill was committed to jail and he will evidently draw a ticket for a term of a year in the Ohio Penitentiary for his peculations.
